

These boneless Chicken Thighs were in the yellow sticker fridge. So initially we intended to do a Pasta sort of gig. Somewhere at some time our plans were lost in the translation! Looked and tasted quite a lot like a Stir-fry to us??.

We really enjoyed this, even though it is far from the Italian gig we had planned. The deep fried Kelp worked really well. But when we do this sort of thing again it needs to be served as a side. The steam from below very quickly destroyed the crispy texture and it reverted to its natural slightly vegetative state. (Read it went soggy!)
